HI-LITER / MCN • AUG. 21-27, 2024 • 2 With new federal waiver, Illinois expanding

Medicaid to nonmedical services Government-funded health program will cover 'social determinants of health'

By Peter Hancock CAPITOL NEWS ILLINOIS

Many people enrolled in the state's Medicaid program will soon be eligible to receive a host of nonmedical services that could improve their overall health, including housing and nutrition assistance, violence prevention services, and services to help them transition out of incarceration. Under a new policy that the Biden administration launched last year, state Medicaid programs can now apply for federal waivers to cover what many people call "social determinants for individuals in mental insti- ing and piloting new solutions waivers from standard Med- insurance program, paying the of health"—the conditions in tutions. which people live that can have a direct impact on their health care needs.

The federal Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services approved Illinois' application for such a waiver July 2. It extends through June 30, 2029, and may be extended beyond that. At the same time, CMS also approved a five-year extension of another waiver originally approved in 2018 that allows coverage of substance use disorder treatment

'You've heard the expression, 'An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.' Well, that's what this waiver means for Illinoisans all across our state," Gov. JB Pritzker said at a recent news conference announcing the waiver approval.

"With this extension, we can build on the demonstrated success of programs that meet these needs—housing support, food and nutrition services, employment assistance, community reintegration, while develop-to ensure that we're meeting the needs of all Illinoisans," he

Medicaid is a publicly funded health insurance program primarily for poor people that is jointly funded by states and the federal government. It was launched in 1965 alongside Medicare, the federally funded health care program for seniors.

For years, the federal government has allowed, and even encouraged, states to innovate with their Medicaid programs by granting them short-term icaid rules. This allows them to try out experimental, pilot or demonstration projects designed to better serve the health care needs of the Medicaid

The waivers are authorized under Section 1115 of the Social Security Act and thus are known as "1115 waivers."

New services

The new waiver adds three new categories of services that will be covered under the Illinois Medicaid program for individuals who qualify. But state officials estimate it will take at least a year to get the new services up and running.

The first and most far-reaching of those covers "health-related social needs," or HRSN services. That includes such things as housing and food assistance for Medicaid enrollees who either have or are at risk of developing costly chronic health conditions and who have a documented need for such

The waiver covers expenses such as first month's rent, moving expenses and utility hookups, as well as temporary housing before and after hospitalization. It does not, however, cover construction costs for brick-and-mortar projects or services for people who are "not lawfully present in the United States or are undocu-

A second new category covers violence prevention and intervention services for Medicaid recipients who either have been victims of violence in the past, are currently experiencing violence, or are at risk of experiencing violence in the future.

Elizabeth Whitehorn, director of the Department of Healthcare and Family Services, said Illinois is the first state in the nation to receive approval for covering violence prevention and intervention under an 1115 waiver.

The waiver allows for reimbursement of a wide range of services for those who qualify, such as psychotherapy, grief counseling, mindfulness and relaxation-based treatments, art therapy, life skills training, and crisis intervention.

Finally, the new waiver authorizes Illinois to provide specific health-related services to incarcerated individuals for 90 days immediately before their expected release. That includes case management to assess their physical, behavioral, and health-related social care, but it is the sum of all needs. It also includes ensur- our experiences, our jobs, our ing they have a 30-day supply homes. So in caring for some of their prescription medications, along with any medical equipment or supplies they may need immediately upon their release.

As a condition of that waiver, Illinois will be required to provide Medicaid enrollment support for individuals entering a correctional facility, and it will only be allowed to suspend—not terminate—the Medicaid benefits of anyone already enrolled in the program once they enter the institution.

Expanding Medicaid's mission

In the nearly 60 years since its inception, the Medicaid program in the United States has undergone many changes and grown exponentially. But its core function has always been that of a publicly funded health cost of health care services for its members, the bulk of whom are children, young mothers and low-income seniors. In 2021, according to CMS, Medicaid paid for about 41 percent of all childbirths in the United States. The National Institutes of Health estimates Medicaid pays for the care of about 62 percent of all nursing home residents.

In Illinois, Medicaid covers about 4 million individuals, with a total cost in the current fiscal year of nearly $27 billion, including both state and

The new 1115 waivers, however, represent a fundamental change in Medicaid's core function, moving it beyond the role of paying reimbursements for medical services into the role of funding a broader array of nonmedical social services.

State officials said they do not have an estimate of how much the new services will

But Illinois Medicaid Director Kelly Cunningham said in an interview the new services covered under the waiver are still consistent with Medicaid's original purpose.

"The heart of the Medicaid program is ensuring equity across the population we serve," she said. "What we have learned, and what many other states have learned, particularly coming out of the COVID pandemic, is that what individuals need to be successful and healthy isn't just health-related services. They need access-through transportation and through housing support and through food and nutrition-access to those types of services to really help them stay healthy.'

Cunningham said that in crafting the new policies covered under the waiver, IDHFS worked closely with the General Assembly, and specifically its Medicaid working group, an informal group made up of members from both parties and both chambers that meets privately to discuss and develop state health care policy.

State Rep. Robyn Gabel, D-Evanston, a cochair of the working group, said at the news conference in July she fully endorsed the new policy.

"Illinois is taking a truly transformative step in addressing the root causes of health disparities," she said. "Our health is not only our medical of the most vulnerable populations, we need to account for issues from housing, to food insecurity, to transition from incarceration."

But Sen. Dave Syverson, R-Cherry Valley, the leading Senate Republican on the working group, questioned during a separate interview whether the state needs to set up new programs within its Medicaid system to provide services that are already being provided through other agen-

"If programs were the answer, Illinois should have some of the best outcomes in the country," he said. "Because we have so many programs that deal with each one of those social determinants, whether it's housing, violence

Johns Hopkins Extreme Risk Protection Order (ERPO) Resource Center makes a visit to Lake County Gun Violence Prevention Initiative to promote public safety

Recently the Lake County State's Attorney's Office Gun Violence Prevention Initiative was honored to host faculty members and researchers from the Johns Hopkins Extreme Risk Protection Order (ERPO) Resource Center in Lake County and lead trainings to local law enforcement officers and service providers about Firearm Restraining Orders (FROs).

The ERPO Resource Center is part the Center for Gun Violence Solutions at the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health which addresses gun violence as a public health emergency and utilizes objective, non-partisan research to develop solutions which inform, fuel and propel policy to measurably lower

"Our Gun Violence Prevention Initiative is saving lives by actively addressing the root causes of gun violence. By limiting access to firearms through this type of court order, we can protect the public and prevent violence from those exhibiting dangerous behavior. This is our mission: to strategically increase resources and be proactive in crime prevention," said State's Attorney Rinehart who attended the trainings this week.

On August 13, the GVPI, accompanied by the Johns Hopkins ERPO Resource Center, the Illinois Attorney General's Office, and Illinois State Police, attended and presented at the monthly Lake County Chief of Police Meeting. During this presentation, Assistant Attorney General-Law Enforcement Training Coordinator Cordelia Coppleson led a training on FROs and shared particulars as it relates to usage in 'One of our main goals in the GVPI is to prevent homicides, suicides, and incidental shootings by restricting access to firearms by children and individuals who are at a high risk of harming themselves or others. The GVPI is extremely grateful for the support of our local community leaders and both statewide and national partners like the John Hopkins ERPO Resource Center as we continue to identify and implement best practices for spreading awareness and increasing the usage of FROs," Tierra Lemon, Director of the GVPI

After the presentation, the GVPI and the John Hopkins team met with physicians and medical students from Lake County medical institutions and facilitated a conversation to better understand how local medical professionals can utilize the FRO to support patients in crisis and the unique role clinicians play in raising awareness about the tool.

The following day, law enforcement officers and service providers from throughout the county were invited to a breakfast and roundtable event at Rosalind Franklin University. At the breakfast, law enforcement officers discussed FRO utilization, shared what is working, identified challenges they are seeing in implementation, and learned from experts in this field who shared key trends and best practices from localities across the country.

The FRO Roundtable brought together social workers, advocates, attorneys, law enforcement officers, educators, physicians, public health experts, and students to discuss how to promote education and awareness, overcome challenges in implementation, and emphasize the unique role of law enforcement in executing the Firearms Restraining Order.

"It is important to remember that when someone is in a crisis, they need time to seek help and support. Tools like the Firearm Restraining Order allow residents of Illinois to hit pause on a situation so the individual in crisis can heal. The GVPI Team is excited to strengthen the partnership with Johns Hopkins ERPO Resource Center and local practitioners in Lake County as we continue to invest in a holistic approach to public safety and gun violence prevention," Rachel Jacoby, Gun Violence Prevention Specialist, stated.

The GVPI will continue to be a resource for Lake County residents, law enforcement, and stakeholders to promote public safety through education and implementation of the Firearms Restraining Order tool.

Lake County Board Members lead at National Association of Counties Annual Conference with policy resolutions

Lake County Vice-Chair Mary Ross-Cunningham and Board Members Marah Altenberg, Jennifer Clark, Angelo Kyle, and John Wasik recently returned from the National Association of Counties (NACo) Annual Conference in Hillsborough County, Florida, where they played a role in shaping national policy. At the conference, Vice Chair Cunningham and Board Member Clark presented key resolutions for inclusion in NACo's American County Platform, the organization's permanent policy

"Once again, Lake County is demonstrating its leadership at this national conference, introducing important policy changes and addressing topics for the benefit of our residents," said County Board Chair

The NACo resolutions process empowers members to engage in national policy discussions and decisions on issues directly affecting their counties. Resolutions presented to NACo's policy steering committees are considered for adoption by the Board of Directors and, if approved, guide NACo's legislative advocacy for the coming year.

Vice Chair Cunningham proposed a resolution to NACo's Justice and Public Safety Steering Committee, urging Congress to provide additional federal funding for county deflection initiatives. These initiatives aim to divert non-violent individuals from jails to treatment programs during behavioral health crises.

"Lake County has had much success with our COaST and 'A Way Out' deflection programs," said Vice Chair Mary Ross-Cunningham. "Our resolution calls for increased funding to further support our programs and to offer similar opportunities to smaller counties lacking resources."

The County's "A Way Out" program and the Crisis Outreach and Support Team (COaST) focus on providing necessary services and treatment to individuals instead of incarceration.

Addressing public safety and environmental health concerns along rail lines, Board Member Clark presented a resolution to NACo's Transportation Steering Committee. The policy focuses on issues such as blocked crossings, freight train lengths and the routing of hazardous materials.

The resolution urges Congress and the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) to mitigate delays and pollution caused by idling freight trains and blocked gate crossings, which negatively impact public safety and economic development. It also requests funding and recommendations for strategic grade separations to enhance roadway capacity and safety

"By tackling these critical issues, we can ensure train safety, protect the environment from air pollution, reduce risks associated with transporting hazardous materials and safeguard the well-being of our residents and communities," said Member Clark.

Member Clark also proposed to NACo's Telecommunications and Technology Steering Committee that Congress reauthorize the Affordable Connectivity Program (ACP), which provided free or low-cost internet services to eligible low-income residents. Despite its success, the Federal Communications Commission ended the ACP in June 2024 due to lack of funding.

Alongside these national efforts, Lake County continues to address highspeed internet service and digital equity through its Digital Growth Initiative. The County's Broadband and Digital Equity Action Plan aims to bridge the digital divide.

"All of our residents should have access to affordable high-speed internet," said Member Clark, who also chairs the Special Committee on Broadband. "We must continue to remove barriers, improve device access and offer digital skills training so everyone can thrive in an increasingly digital society."

All resolutions presented by Lake County were adopted by their respective committees.

Board members and county staff attended various sessions at the conference, gaining valuable insights on artificial intelligence, public safety, environmental sustainability and more. This information will be shared with Lake County government teams for further evaluation and consideration.

Lake County announces $850 million transportation improvement program

The Lake County Division of Transportation (LCDOT) has launched a new interactive dashboard displaying the more than 300 projects in its 2024-2029 Transportation Improvement Program that was recently adopted by the Lake County Board.

The program is designed to maintain the more than 900 lane miles of county highways, increase driver and pedestrian safety, improve mobility and reduce carbon emissions. This program is updated annually to show the projects planned in the current year and the next five

"The Lake County Board is proud to be investing more than $850 million in transportation projects over the next six years," said Lake County Board Chair Sandy Hart. "Miles of new bike paths and sidewalks will be constructed, along with many more safety improvements. One railroad grade separation is planned, while an additional two locations are being studied that would eliminate traffic backups when trains pass through."

About the program

The 2024-2029 Transportation Improvement Program breaks down into three different categories in order of

"Our top priority is keeping existing infrastructure in good condition while actively seeking ways to make our transportation system safer for pedestrians and motorists," said Jennifer Clark, Public Works and Transportation Committee Chair and Board Member for District 15. "The program is designed to have a wide variety of projects to address local and regional transportation needs."

1. Preservation projects keep county highway pavements, bridges, bikeways and signals in a state of good repair. These include road resurfacings, culvert replacements and bridge repairs. They are the most common type of project.

2. Modernization projects focus on increasing safety, reducing delays and improving non-motorized transportation. These include roundabouts, traffic signals, added turn-lanes, bike paths, sidewalks and pedestrian

3. Expansion projects add capacity to the system to reduce traffic congestion. These include constructing railroad/road grade separations, adding travel lanes to a road to eliminate a bottleneck and sometimes re-aligning

The 2024-2029 Transportation Improvement Program shows all of LCDOT's projects currently in the works. Check out the new interactive dashboard at https://lakecountyil.maps.arcgis.com/apps/ dashboards/5fa2f2b122f34f8faad43d02fa817312. It integrates with LCDOT's Project Tracker, providing more information than ever before.

"The public can view detailed project information using the same tool our team utilizes," said Shane Schneider, LCDOT Director of Transportation. "This is a great way to be informed of all the LCDOT projects in your area in the coming years."

Circuit Court of Lake County continues to lead the way in family court services

County Circuit Court is making two new changes to better meet the changing needs of our community.

First, in appropriate cases where counsel represents both parties and the parties have agreed to the terms of their divorce settlement, the court may accept agreed-upon affidavits to "prove-up" or settle divorce cases. "Using affidavits eliminates the need for people going through a divorce to come to court and testify in person about what they have already agreed to, allowing them to instead spend their valuable time at work, taking care of their families, and moving on with their lives," said Chief Judge

Already a leader in courts Daniel B. Shanes. Notably, across Illinois, the Lake the court can still require that the settlement be presented in court with witnesses when either a party or the judge requests to do so.

In addition, recognizing the increasing number of family law and divorce cases involving individuals without legal representation, Chief Judge Shanes is pleased to announce the coming assignment of a second judge designated for

"The need has been compelling, with over 50% of all divorce and family cases having at least one party representing themselves and approximately one-third of both sides representing them- and beneficially allocated,' selves. Providing access to justice to all parties in the Court preserves trust in our legal system. Equal access to the courts for Self-Represented Litigants is an issue of growing significance, and the fair administration of justice requires the Court to be accessible," said Chief Judge Shanes. Judge Randie Bruno will spearhead this new docket, joining Judge Veronica O'Malley in focusing on family law cases involving individuals who do not have legal representation.

"Our courts in Lake County continue to innovate to meet the needs of our community. We continue to monitor the data to ensure the appropriate resources are the most appropriately said Chief Judge Shanes.

Chain O'Lakes patrol boat dedicated to Tony Borcia and the Y-noT Project

Sheriff John D. Idleburg is proud to reveal that the newest Lake County Sheriff's Office Chain O'Lakes Patrol Boat is being dedicated in Tony Borcia's honor.

Tony's life was tragically taken on July 28, 2012, when he was enjoying a day with his family on the Chain O'Lakes. Tony was tubing, and he fell off the tube. A reckless and careless boater, operating a boat under the influence of cocaine and alcohol, struck and killed Tony.

After he tragically lost his life, Tony's family vowed to make our recreational waterways safer, and founded the Y-noT Project. The Y-noT Project is a non-profit organization that honors Tony Borcia, is dedicated to stopping intoxicated boaters, and providing financial assistance to victims of intoxicated boaters, and other motorists.

The Y-noT Project has invested hundreds of thousands of dollars to keep recreational Chain O'Lakes users safer when enjoying the waterways. The Y-noT Project donated $75,000.00 to the Lake County Sheriff's Office to use to fund equipment and arrest impaired boaters. The generous donation allowed the sheriff's office to free-up funds, helping to purchase a new Chain O'Lakes patrol

At a ceremony held July 30, the new Fluid Watercraft Patrol Boat was dedicated to Tony Borcia. Tony's mother and president of the Y-noT Project, and others from the Y-noT Project were present for the cer-

Sheriff John D. Idleburg said at the ceremony, "I am proud to unveil that this boat will honor Tony Borcia and the Y-noT Project! This boat will be used to stop impaired boaters from causing harm on the Chain O'Lakes, it will be there for those who need our emergency assistance, and it will exist in Tony's name and memory."

The Lake County Sheriff's Office is proud to have a strong partnership with the Y-noT Project and will proudly display a Y-noT Project sticker on its newest Chain O'Lakes Patrol Boat.

The Sheriff's Department recently dedicated the Chain O'Lakes patrol boat in Tony Borcia's honor. Some of Tony's family, founders of the Y-noT Project, were in attendace at the dedication.

"What we're trying to do is to offer services to the Medicaid population that will help actually improve their health and improve their outcomes," she said. "And the services we're offering are really specifically defined—housing tenancy sup-port, helping people learn to be a good tenant, how to search for housing, how to negotiate a lease—those specific services are what we are looking to cover in the Medicaid program."

Pritzker signs executive order for strategic plan on aging Illinoisans

Administration doubles down on tech industries in 5-year plan for business growth

By Hannah Meisel and Andrew Adams

CAPITOL NEWS ILLINOIS Gov. JB Pritzker last week kicked off a decade-long process to address the needs of aging Illinoisans, signing an executive order to hire a chief planning officer within the state's Department on Aging. With the U.S. Census Bureau estimating that approximately one quarter of Illinois' population expected to be 60 or older by 2030, the chief planning officer will oversee the creation of a 10-year strategic plan "with the goal of strengthening Illinois as an aging-friendly state," according to the executive order.

Pritzker's office did not indicate who might fill that role, but after the position is filled, the clock will start ticking toward a December 2025 deadline to deliver a comprehensive plan to the governor and the General Assembly that could eventually be turned into policy.

In his second term as governor, Pritzker has proposed more state investments in areas like child care and preschool, but he has not yet

"We know that it's not just about supporting aging adults, but also being mindful of caretaker needs and the complex needs of individuals with disabilities, and this plan will ensure no one is left behind," the governor said in a statement announcing the execu-

For more than two decades, the state has operated the Illinois Caregiver Support Program, which offers resources to those taking care of elderly parents, neighbors and grandparents—along grandparents who are raising their grandchildren. But the program is small and not well-

Past governors' administrations have made two-year plans on aging, which continued under Pritzker as Illinois is currently on the state's fifth such plan. Under the 10-year plan, the state's chief planning officer is asked to coordinate across agencies including the Departments of Corrections, hicles program.

Business development

The Illinois Department of Commerce and Economic Opportunity published a fiveyear plan last week, outlining how it hopes to attract and retain businesses in the state. At the plan's center is a strategy to invest in six industries that will receive "prioritized support," capital investment and job training. They are life science, quantum computing, clean energy production, advanced manufacturing, next generation agriculture and transportation.

Some of these industries, including agriculture, have long been staples of the state's economy. Others, like clean energy and quantum computing, have become policy priorities for the Pritzker administration in recent years.

In the last two years, the state has given just over $1 billion in tax incentives to companies in the supply chain for electric vehicles and clean energy production through the Reimagining Energy and Ve-

Deals brokered through those programs are often part of larger packages of tax breaks, state-backed loans and other incentives. The governor's office estimated PsiQuantum's total incentives package was worth $200 mil-

The five-year plan was put together by DCEO in "consistent collaboration and consultation" with Intersect Illinois, opment agency founded eight years ago with backing from then-Gov. Bruce Rauner. Intersect is a major player in "Team Illinois," an informal coalition of business groups and government officials that lobbies companies to set up shop in Illinois. The group, which has so far operated on a somewhat ad hoc basis, consists of the governor's office, DCEO, Intersect, trade associations, public utilities and other groups, according to the department's five-year

DCEO's plan also said it is formalizing the process these groups use to court new business developments, hoping to operate as a "unified front" for attracting investment.

The plan also lays out several proposed "areas for improvement" to state policy on business incentives. These include expanding the incentive program available to advanced manufacturers like vehicle and electronic manufacturers, granting regional economic development officials the ability to establish geographic "enterprise zones" that provide tax breaks, and further extending a tax credit for research and development.
