High court: Smell of burnt cannabis is not cause for warrantless vehicle search

State supreme court rules unanimously in case stemming from 2020 traffic stop

By Hannah Meisel
CAPITOL NEWS ILLINOIS

Law enforcement officers in Illinois cannot rely on the smell of burnt cannabis alone to justify searching a vehicle without a warrant, the Illinois Supreme Court ruled on Sept. 19.

The decision was unanimous, though Justice Lisa Holder White did not take part in it. Writing for the court, Justice P. Scott Neville pointed to Illinois' landmark 2019 law legalizing recreational cannabis, which decriminalized the possession of the drug up to 30 grams.

"The laws on cannabis have changed in such a drastic way as to render the smell of burnt cannabis, standing alone, insufficient to provide probable cause for a police officer to search a vehicle without a warrant," Neville wrote in a 20-page opinion.

The case stems from September 2020, when Ryan

Redmond was pulled over by an Illinois State Police trooper on Interstate 80 in Henry County, just east of the Quad Cities. Redmond's license plate was allegedly not properly secured to his vehicle, and he was driving three miles above the speed limit, according to court records.

But during the interaction, the trooper allegedly smelled burnt cannabis in Redmond's vehicle and upon searching the vehicle, he found approximately a gram of cannabis in the car's center console.

Redmond was later charged with a misdemeanor for failure to transport cannabis in an odor-proof container.

The court found that the trooper's detection of the "burnt cannabis" odor in the vehicle "certainly established reasonable suspicion to investigate further," but noted that the officer's further investigation yielded nothing more, including no signs that Redmond's driving was impaired. Therefore, Neville wrote, the officer's reasonable suspicion should have never advanced to "probable cause to search."

Though the court acknowledged the trooper's initial suspicion that Redmond could've "smoked cannabis in the car at some point" was not out of the realm of possibility, Neville pointed out that the officer not only "observed no signs of impairment" but also found no drug paraphernalia or evidence of cannabis use in the car on further investigation.

The trooper "also did not smell the odor of burnt cannabis on Redmond, which undercuts the reasonable belief that Redmond had recently smoked cannabis inside the vehicle while on an Illinois highway," the opinion said.

The court heard Redmond's case in January, alongside arguments in a related case focused on the section in Illinois law that requires cannabis be stored in a sealed, odor-proof container if being transported in a car.

In that case, an Illinois State Police trooper pulled over a car for speeding in rural Whiteside County, also near the Quad Cities, and then arrested the passenger of the vehicle for unlawful possession of cannabis. According to court records, Vincent Molina's December 2020 arrest came after the officer found a small box of rolled joints in a vehicle search predicated on the smell of raw cannabis in the car, though Molina told the officer he had a medical cannabis card.

Though the Supreme Court heard the cases in consolidated arguments earlier this year, the justices only ruled on Redmond's case Sept. 19. The decision briefly mentioned the Molina case in a footnote saying the court was not addressing "the validity of the odor-proof container requirement" in the Redmond decision.

Ahead of the joint oral arguments in January, national and state-level chapters of the American Civil Liberties Union and the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers filed a brief in support of Molina and Redmond, writing that allowing the odor of cannabis as cause for searching a vehicle will lead to biased enforcement against Black and Latino Illinoisans.

"There is a decades-long pattern of police in this state using pretext like cannabis odor to disproportionately stop and search Black and Latino drivers," the brief reads. Illinois' stop and search policy "unfairly subjects (Black and Latino drivers) to at-will intrusions of their privacy and relegates them to second-class citizenry."

The organizations argued the legalization of cannabis means its presence is not indicative of contraband or crime.

The Sept. 19 opinion also noted that other states agree, holding up a Kansas Supreme Court decision from earlier this year as an example. High courts in other states, including Minnesota, Delaware, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Vermont have ruled similarly, though Wisconsin's Supreme Court decided the opposite in a 2023 ruling.

Other states have also passed laws prohibiting warrantless searches of vehicles based solely on the smell of cannabis. But a similar effort in Illinois stalled last year as the Redmond and Molina cases were pending.

Dilpreet Raju contributed to this report.

Old McHenry Crossings project moves toward design phase

Lake County Board approves joint resolution to enter into an agreement for phase II

The engineering design contract for a new grade separation and several other related improvements as part of the Lake County Division of Transportation's (LCDOT) Old McHenry Crossings Project, brings it one step closer to reality. On September 10, the Lake County Board approved a joint resolution to enter into an agreement for Phase II engineering design services for the project.

The Old McHenry Crossings Project proposes to construct a grade separation of Old McHenry Road at the Canadian National railroad tracks, improve the Fairfield Road and Midlothian Road intersections, upgrade Quentin Road by adding travel lanes and a new traffic signal at Highland Drive and implement non-motorized improvements throughout the entire project limits.

"Our continued investments in transportation allow us to make impactful improvements for our residents and visitors, providing safe walking and biking paths while decreasing congestion," said Sandy Hart, Lake County Board Chair. "Old McHenry Crossings is one of the largest projects that the Lake County Division of Transportation has ever undertaken."

Now that the project is in Phase II, it's considered to be in the middle of three engineering phases that start with Planning (Phase I) and end with Construction (Phase III). During phase II, construction plans are prepared, permits and other regulatory approvals are obtained and the property and easements necessary to build the improvement is purchased. The Old McHenry Crossing Project is projected to cost about $150 million, including all engineering phases and construction. Due to the size and complexity of the project, construction is planned to take place in three stages, with the first stage starting as soon as 2027, depending on project readiness, land acquisition and funding availability.

"The focus will now be on lining up critical funding for the project," said Jennifer Clark, Lake County Public Works and Transportation Committee Chair and District 15 Board Member. "Lake County is applying for federal funds that will assist with the project being ready to begin construction as soon as the Phase II design is completed."

Nearly 30,000 vehicles pass through the Old McHenry Crossings corridor each day. Four highly traveled regional highways converging to this area, frequent freight trains and three closely spaced intersections along Old McHenry Road have resulted in high traffic volumes and delays. Nearly 370 crashes have occurred in this area over the last five years. For these reasons, the corridor has been identified in Lake County's 2040 Transportation Plan, which recommends improvements necessary to address the future transportation needs of Lake County.

"This proposed project will be crucial to improve safety, increase connectivity and reduce traffic delays for many motorists, pedestrians and bicyclists who use Old McHenry Road and the surrounding roads each day," said Jessica Vealitzek, Lake County Board Member District 10. "Particularly exciting will be the new grade separation at the railroad tracks, which will mean that motorists will no longer have to sit and wait for the nearly 20 trains that pass through the area each day."

LCDOT held a number of public meetings to introduce the Old McHenry Crossings Project, collect input from residents and explain the preferred alternative. More than 200 residents attended the last public meeting and dozens have provided feedback in-person and online at omxproject.com.

"Thank you to all the residents who took the time to provide their input regarding this project whether it was by attending one of the public information meetings or accessing and completing the online form. Your thoughtful feedback is incredibly necessary in this process so we can make improvements that will positively impact communities within Lake County," said Adam Schlick, Lake County Board Member District 2. "Eliminating the existing at-grade crossing, which has served as a barrier for first responders when long trains pass through, will improve response times for public safety professionals." "In addition to reduced travel times for residents and commuters, the proposed infrastructure improvements include enhanced stormwater management facilities that control flooding and improve water quality of runoff that enters our lakes and streams," said Sara Knizhnik, Lake County Board Member District 18.

Upcoming events at historic Powers-Walker House in Glacial Park

Fall back in time at McHenry County Conservation District’s historic Powers-Walker House this autumn.

Located at Glacial Park on Route 31 and Harts Road in Ringwood, Powers-Walker House is a rich educational and historical resource that is open for special events and programs throughout the year. By participating in these events, visitors gain insight to the early settlers’ connection to the land. Powers-Walker House was designated as a Historic Landmark by the McHenry County Board February 3, 2015. All Powers-Walker House programs are free, all-ages, drop-in programs. No registration required.

Experience Twilight at the Farmhouse on Thursday, Oct. 3 from 6 to 8 p.m. Enjoy the twilight ambiance of the Powers-Walker House by candlelight and lamplight while enjoying a fall evening viewing the ever-changing colors in the Lost Valley Marsh. Smell the aromas and see what is being baked in the wood-burning stove. See how early settlers tried to get the remains of their work done at the day’s end.

Travel back in time for Harvest Time in 1858 on Sunday, Nov. 3 from noon to 4 p.m. Try your hand at shelling corn, grinding corn into flour or making a corn husk or yarn doll. Witness harvest activities like the baking of bread in the wood-burning cookstove and grinding herbs for winter use. Tour the historic farmhouse to learn more about its restoration.

For more information, call (815) 338-6223 or visit MCCD.me/PWH.

MCDH reports first West Nile Virus related death since 2018

The McHenry County Department of Health (MCDH) is saddened to report that an individual previously diagnosed with West Nile Virus (WNV) in McHenry County has passed away. The individual, who was in their 80s, developed symptoms in August and later succumbed to the illness. This marks the first WNV-related death in McHenry County since 2018.

There is no vaccine or treatment for WNV. Mild symptoms can be relieved with rest, fluids, and over-the-counter medications for pain and fever. Seek medical attention if you or an individual you know develops severe symptoms.

The MCDH reminds residents to protect themselves from mosquito-borne illnesses. Culex mosquitoes typically breed in stagnant water with high organic content, often found in artificial containers like rimless tires, abandoned swimming pools, buckets, bird baths, and clogged gutters.

The first and best defense against mosquito-borne illness is to eliminate potential mosquito breeding sites on your property by emptying standing water from containers around your home and ensuring doors and windows have tight-fitting screens.

With no vaccine currently available for WNV, it is important to use other measures for protection while enjoying the outdoors. When outdoors, wear long-sleeved shirts, pants, shoes, and socks, especially during dawn and dusk when Culex mosquitoes are most active.

Use EPA-registered insect repellents with one of the following active ingredients, and apply them according to label directions:

- DEET (N,N-diethyl-m-toluamide)
- Picaridin (KBR 3023)
- IR3535 (a biopesticide)
- Oil of lemon eucalyptus (OLE)
- Para-menthane-diol (PMD)
- 2-undecanone

Consult with a doctor before using any repellent on infants.

For more information on WNV, visit www.mcdh.info or call (815) 334-4510.
